For Conversations on a Journey The Rev'd Harry Eerkes has recorded some of his reflections on a selection of Lent and Holy Week lectionary readings in an easily accessible "poetic-prose" style;

In reading Part I of this creative work, you will meet some of the people who met and knew Jesus, see him through their eyes, and hear him through their ears.

Part II of the book provides questions for sharing and reflection and "Continuing the Conversations" personally or in a group setting.

Conversations on a Journey is attractively illustrated with photography by Dale Lyttle, Lynda Rose, Felicia Rozema and the author, and features art work by Sandra Fowler, Emily Ambrogio, Mary Eerkes-Rozema, Sr. Marie-Paul Farrel, OSB, and Steven St. Clair.

What others say:

Herbert O'Driscoll - It is one thing to look back at Jesus through the layers of time that separate us from his earthly life. It is another to walk with him, to converse with him, to be aware of his presence. In these conversations the author opens a door through time that allows us this privilege.

These conversations, reverently and vividly imagined, are a kind of road map through the weeks and months that will forever be sacred time for Christians. On the road we do not merely learn again what happened, we experience a relationship with the Person to whom these things happened, and, in the mysterious way in which the past can become present, we realize again that His journey and our Journey can, if we choose to walk His road, become one Journey.

The Rev'd Canon Herbert O'Driscoll is a Celtic pilgrim, best-selling author, superb story teller and engaging lecturer.

Selinde Krayenhoff - "It's so easy to walk around with eyes half closed." In this collection of poetic conversations, Harry Eerkes gently nudges us awake to journey through Lent with fresh eyes and open hearts. In his unique reflections on Scripture, Harry warns that when you invite Jesus for dinner, "you never know what will happen next." Harry's explorations of scripture passages that have become overly familiar bring biblical places, faces, words and gestures to life and infuse them with new meaning."

Selinde Krayenhoff is founding publisher of Island Parent Magazine and leads workshops in Nonviolent Communication.

Harold Munn - "Harry has given us an imaginative re-telling of the central events leading to Good Friday and Easter. Each is a meditation from the point of view of an observer who gently yet with challenge describes the outer and inner landscape of each scene. A great resource for thinking and feeling more deeply into those central events of our faith. Thanks, Harry, for a great contribution - you will have had a great time writing it! I loved the phrase "Rome sealed tomb!"

The Rev'd Canon Harold Munn is rector of St. John the Divine Anglican Church in Victoria, a strong social justice advocate, and a knowledgeable spokesperson in the area of church-society relationships.
