CHRISTOPHANY:
Experiencing the Fullness of Christianity

Audio Teaching by
CYNTHIA BOURGEAULT

What is Christophany?

"We awaken as the beloved in every last corner of our being."

In this recorded teaching, Cynthia Bourgeault captures the lively vision revealed in Raimon Panikkar's book, Christophany: The Fullness of Man. Christophany is a way of knowing Jesus from within through an active, interabiding relationship. The vibrancy of our being depends on the immediacy of the living Christ within us.

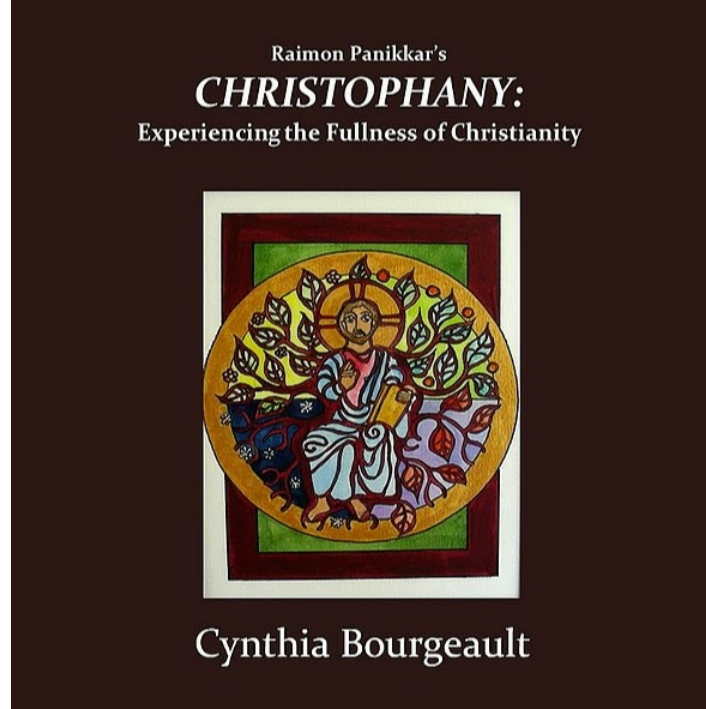

Here is a glimpse of these exciting teachings in Cynthia's own words:

Interabiding

“ . . . If you want to use one word which captures Jesus' lived experience in a nutshell, that word is interabiding . . . ”

“ . . . Neither of the two classic options about our identity posed by the world's great religions holds entirely true. I am not myself God (Atman is Brahman, Brahman is Atman, in the Hindu Vedanta ways), but neither am I entirely separate, as a rigid monotheism would hold. How many of you grew up being told that you and God are completely different, that God is of a different kind than you? Many of us have. [Panikkar] says, when we look inside ourselves, we simply know this is not so . . . He says, 'Neither am I exactly identical with God nor am I entirely separate.' Instead, and Panikkar's entire argument hinges on this, 'I discover myself as the thou of an I. God is the I and I am God's thou. I am God's beloved.' ”

NEW INTERVIEW WITH CYNTHIA BOURGEAULT

"A true teacher is a finger pointing to the moon..."

~ Cynthia Bourgeault

Chalice Magazine, a German publisher dedicated to sharing the works of English author and mystic Reshad Feild, recently engaged Cynthia to share her perspectives on a number of timely and thought-provoking topics. In this short excerpt she responds to a question about loyalty and reciprocity in the spiritual teacher and student relationship:

"A true teacher is a finger pointing to the moon - through the purity of that pointing, the student is able to see the moon, and by the light of that moon, the student sees the beauty and purity of the teacher. Thus, loyalty is never demanded, but only patience to trust the process and trust the teacher until the eye of the needle has been navigated. And even here, the student's personal integrity is never violated, even for the most sincere of reasons. Reciprocity grows out of mutual respect, humility, and trust, as binding on the teacher as on the student."
